Translation from:
http://www.lrytas.lt/-13002125121299497454-nacistinio-mar%C5%A1o-su-%C5%A1%C5%ABkiu-lietuva-lietuviams-organizatorius-dirba-lietuvos-genocido-ir-rezistencijos-tyrimo-centre.htm

_____

Organizer of Nazi March with Slogan "Lithuania for Lithuanians" works at the Lithuanian Center for the Study of Genocide and Resistance
Lrytas.lt

15 March 2011

Main organizer Ričardas Čekutis [Richardas Chekutis] of the March 11th Nazi march through Vilnius where the slogan "Lithuania for Lithuanians" was shouted works as senior specialist for public relations at the Lithuanian Center for the Study of Genocide and Resistance. Čekutis thus works in the field of Holocaust education at the same time as he leads the Center of Nationalist Youth which maintains ties with skinhead and similar organizations.

Čekutis was previously employed as assistant to member of parliament Dalia Kuodytė (Liberal Union faction) [who left the Genocide Research Center, where she was director, in order to enter the country's Seimas or Parliament].

Is it possible in an EU country for a Nazi candidate in the 21st century to curate the theme of the mass murder of 220,000 Lithuanian citizens at an institution funded by the state? It turns out that it is possible. Is this not spitting in the face of the victims of genocide and not a mockery of the several thousand surviving Lithuanian Jews and the government's own idea of announcing this year as the year to commemorate the Holocaust?

Čekutis was earlier an assistant to MP Dalia Kuodytė. She did relieve him of his post after Čekutis and other Young Lithuania party members used the campaign slogan "Without gays, blacks, reds and camp Gypsies" during municipal elections.

The Lithuanian Center for the Study of the Genocide of Lithuanian Residents is criticized abroad because there is no Holocaust exhibition at the center. Now the center could also achieve infamy as the only institution researching genocide in the world whose reputation is the responsibility of a 21st century Nazi candidate.