It was an honor on Thursday to welcome Viktoras Pranckietis, the speaker of the Lithuanian Parliament, and Julius Pranevicius, the Consul General of Lithuania in New York, to New Britain. The speaker, the third highest ranking official in that Baltic nation, is in the U.S. for a few days (he just came from Washington D.C. where he met with Speaker Ryan) and wanted to stop by New Britain to discuss the construction of a monument in New Britain to honor Vytautas Ramanauskas-Vanagas. Vytautas was born on the East Side in 1918 and later returned to Lithuania to fight during the Soviet occupation to fight for the country's independence. He was later captured by the KGB and sentenced to death in 1957. After visiting City Hall, the Speaker traveled to Little Poland, New Britain, Connecticut to have lunch at Staropolska Restaurant.
